2 1 1

Privately set behind an unassuming façade, this beautifully presented mid-1960s home reveals itself as a thoughtfully transformed residence, where a considered contemporary rear addition enhances both liveability and connection to its exceptional garden setting. Light-filled and quietly sustainable, it is a home where character and comfort align with surprising ease.

The original home retains its mid-century integrity through period steel windows, solid wood heaters and a striking Castlemaine slate chimney surround, grounding the home in warmth and authenticity. In contrast, the modern extension unfolds seamlessly to the rear, opening to landscaped gardens and outdoor living spaces. Here, a generous north-facing open-plan living, kitchen and dining
