5 2 3

Set behind custom-designed electric gates on approximately 8 acres at the very edge of the Castlemaine Diggings National Park, this five-bedroom brick home sits elevated and private, pulled back from the road as though it has always known its place in the landscape. To the rear, the bush simply begins, and with it, a daily chorus of native birds, the rustle of seasons changing, and the unhurried rhythm of a life lived well.

At the heart of the home is a generous open-plan living, dining and kitchen space that breathes. The kitchen is built to work: solid Jarrah cabinetry, gold-flecked granite benchtops, a freestanding Smeg gas cooktop and oven, Asko dishwasher, filtered kitchen tap and a walk-in pantry. The living room draws the eye immediately to its standout
